of the citizens of Tennessee to speak loudly and frequently in their favor .-Michael Sheffner, Esq., the agent for their sale in this State, paid our town a visit last week, and while here he showed us hundreds of certificates received at various times and places, testifying of their worth to the farmer. He also showed us a beautiful silver medal, awarded to R. H. Pease by the New York State Agricultural Society when these implements were exhibited there last year. There remains not a doubt but that they will come fully up to public expectation, and amply community have long since experienced in this particular branch of agriculture. We therefore recommend these machines to the consideration of the farmers of this county.

MEMORY'S CHAIN.

BY A. M. B.

"The thoughts of other years are tushing onme. The lovel, the lost, the distant and the dead Are with me now."

I've chanced on Mem'ry's broken chain And gathered up its links again; A few mementos kert for years Have made the chain complete,-And loys, and tears, and heres and fear And looks, and tones more sweet, Are thrilling my keart answ-anew As it thrilled in other years.

Thou art with me now! 'Tis the "stilly bur!' Our souls are fill of its witching power Thy voice has caught the melody That swells is the Autumn breeze, And like some fell-deep symphony Borne o'e' moon-lit seas, Is thetting for you.--for you As it utilled in other rears Whilemy lifted eye drinks light from thin And by full coul thus speaks to mine, The stars look out from their homes fat, Lite jewels in night'scrown, And Dian floats up h her silver car thimmering radiancedown, Low words, like heart throbs, are welling o'er With the love of oldentime.

'Tis past!-thy soul enfuncing glance, Thy dark eye's love lit ndimce In its last took awakesa spell As mouraful as of vore When our spirits took amute farewell

In that parting long ago, And my heart is briming o'er and o'er, With the griefs of olden twee I'll link no more! the tass is vain To clasp those riven links amin;

Around my soul were offers thrown Which could not be und ne, Ere my lone life the gow had known Of its meridian sun, And all that's left to po-to thee-

Is Mem'ry's broken char-But, where souls their hadred greet, Where fetterless and ce they meet, Where sever'd hamls in hearth divide, Those raptures will e given Which souls on earth, itemely tried, Can only know in Haven, And worldly wisdom relding thee,

I'll call thee mine agon.
